LET’S THINK ABOUT IT

with

Erin Brewer, Mae Lyle, & Maria Keffler

Erin, Mae, & Maria launched the new video series “Let’s Think About It” in November 2021, discussing current event topics like therapists who blindly affirm transgenderism, a school system in Chicago which opened all its restrooms to both sexes, a man competing on a collegiate women’s swim team, and the duplicitous, ostensible “research” put out by the Trevor Project. Fighting For My Child

By Mae Lyle

Unfortunately, I cannot use my real name or reveal any details that would jeopardize the privacy of my child or our family. I will do whatever I possibly can in order to help save one child from the grips of the transgender ideology.

I got dragged into the world of activism kicking and screaming in hopes of someday saving my adult child from the transgender cult. Our nightmare began while my child was still in college. I fell on my knees and broke down in tears upon hearing the dreaded words “I’m transgender.” I love my child and I always will not matter what.

My child’s narrative sounds exactly like countless others. Childhood history was rewritten, memories forgotten, childhood trauma/mental health history was

Always Erin, by Erin Brewer

When Erin was a very little girl, two men hurt her. She thought that she got hurt because she was a girl, and if she became a boy, she would never be hurt like that again. But with the help of some wise and supportive adults, Erin learned that hurts can happen to anyone. She learned how to love herself as a girl again, and to know that no matter what, she was Always Erin.

ignored. Quick and uniformed consent to get prescribed cross-sex hormones and have harmful irreversible surgery became the goal.

I heard the same things over and over including our "child was born in the wrong body", we must affirm this new identity to prevent suicide, "Do you want a live daughter or a dead son?/Do you want a live son or a dead daughter?"

In early 2018, as I sat in legislators' offices in Washington DC trying to educate young staff members of the unintended consequences of the Equality Act, I came to tears as I listened to other parents read their children's stories. These staff members had no idea what gender identity or identifying as transgender really meant until we made it personal by asking "What if this was your brother/sister, niece/nephew or cousin who wanted to make irreversible life-altering changes to their bodies?"

I have been called anti-trans, trans-phobic, hateful and angry by a so-called expert therapist. This same therapist ignored my child's past trauma and history of depression all the while ignoring the root cause of self-diagnosed gender dysphoria.

The current woke culture causes people to believe that we must accept and affirm someone who identifies as transgender, without any questions, in order to show we are compassionate. Why would I lie to my child by using a wrong name or wrong pronouns?

In the past, I have been a part of two outstanding organizations that each had their own mission in fighting the transgender ideology. Soon it became clear that individuals and organizations (including churches and schools) need to be educated about the harms caused by the gender industry, especially to children. That is why we formed APC. I hope you will join me in my fight.

Mae Lyle taught school for over 20 years. She has taught age groups ranging from three-year-olds to high school seniors. Though retired, she continues to teach as a volunteer tutoring low-income children. After personally witnessing the harms caused by ideologically-based medical practices, she decided to extend her volunteer efforts to help others who have also suffered from these interventions. Mae is a co-founder of both Advocates Protecting Children and Partners for Ethical Care.

So happy I purchased this and read to my daughter this evening. She has many questions lately about if "blue is for boys and pink is for girls" (among many other things). With porn culture and regressive ideology eclipsing common sense and hard-fought rights, things have become much more sexist than when I was growing up.

I expect a certain "Unicorn" to appear at her school soon which will confuse and alienate her and any gender non-conforming or gay classmates. I've been preparing for this and we have open discussion on how stereotypes do not make you a boy or a girl and this book's messaging is right on point in that regard.

This book focuses on trauma in a way that is not scary to kids or intimidating to parents. In simple, matter-of-fact language without revealing too many details on the "hurt" part of the story. Every child can relate to a "bad thing" happening to them and wanting to run away from it. This story helps to show how far some kids will run from pain... And that they can return to and love their bodies again.
